pend of the "flip" began relationship.

As of the wires was sent half way around the world to Mrs. Whitney in Athens, Greece.

He had been called to the stand early to testify by her husband's chief attorney, Robert T. Bushnell, who is a move that took Mrs. Whitney and her army of attorneys by surprise.

As asked point blank to reveal the discovery of her and Higgins together in her bed chamber on November 24, 1923, and she did it by saying he was staying in an adjoining room to protect her and the children from powers.

She denied that the telegram produced by Bushnell showed that she and Higgins were yearly celebrating the 15th of April, and exulted then by saying she was born in London.

On telegram read:

"To me this anniversary will be cherished with divine smiles. Love everlastingly, Laurie."

The others were in a similar vein. Mrs. Whitney, upon first taking the stand, testified under Atty. Bushnell's questioning, that her husband was stingy in his allowance to her, she admitted she had asked him not to waste money on such things and flowers, but said she had the one found her jewels were missing. Bushnell plunged into questioning about Higgins.

Q—How do you want to tell the court it happened Mr. Higgins was

HAROLD O. WHITNEY

Mrs. Harold O. Whitney in Laconia (N. H.) courtroom at the trial of cross-divorce suit, spends most of her time taking notes. Occasionally she looks up and smiles. Her husband is often near collapse as the evidence is unfolded. At one point in the testimony the audience burst into laughter, but Mrs. Whitney simply bent closer over her writing.

how it happened.

Turning to the judge, she said: "I came down to Boston from New Hampshire on October 14. I did not want to see Mr. Whitney."

"There had been men watching the house. The main method of the nurse also, and I noticed it, too. We understood that a male nurse had stolen some valuables from the house of Mr. Whitney, Sr., and had been indicted and convicted."

"Mr. and Mrs. Whitney, Sr., both had worried us to be on guard, to take good care of the children, as the person had vowed that he would come back and that he might do something to harm our children. We had cautioned all servants to guard the children."

SAW TWO MEN

"A man was prowling around our house that afternoon. I was playing bridge and from my window I saw the man going back and forth. There were two men. I remember. They were obviously watching what I was doing."

"I called Lawrence Higgins. I was rather nervous. He said he could not come down. I asked him to come over. If very late. He came much earlier than he expected. Somewhere about 9 o'clock."

"I had asked the point of a pair of scissors in my wrist and I was nervous. I was resting when he came. My arm was black and blue. He didn't like the look of my arm. He talked about getting it tended to and asked me if I would take a sleeping pill."

"I said I would if he would guarantee to keep watch over the house. He said he would. I thought he had better go up on the third floor as the living room was the most obvious place."

FELL ASLEEP

"I went to my room and retired. I was awakened when I saw a light and later heard pounding. I said, 'Hello,' calling the maid. Finally I asked who was there. Mr. Whitney's voice answered, 'It's me.'"

"He said he came for a bottle. 'All right, don't take any of my things,' I said. Later Mr. Whitney made an uncharacteristic noise of banging and I found out that Mr. Higgins was in the next room to me."

"Mr. Higgins had started to make himself comfortable and had fallen asleep. I was surprised at seeing him and I asked him to please go and see those men. I told him Mr. Whitney was there and to let them in. He was only there to protect the children and myself."

SAW HIGGINS

She said she had met Higgins in front of the R. A. A. on May 17, 1923, for the first time. She did not see him again for some months. She began to see him often in 1923.

"I had asked the point of a pair of scissors in my wrist and I was nervous. I was resting when he came. My arm was black and blue. He didn't like the look of my arm. He talked about getting it tended to and asked me if I would take a sleeping pill."

"I said I would if he would guarantee to keep watch over the house. He said he would. I thought he had better go up on the third floor as the living room was the most obvious place."

Q—Ever write to him in endeavoring terms? A—No.

Q—Did he ever refer to you in endeavoring terms? A—No, not alone, only before Mr. Whitney, my family and other persons.

LEFT HUSBAND

Q—Did he call you his sweetheart? A—I don't remember that he did.

She said she and her husband ceased living together in October or September, 1923. She said she was left at the lake at Meredith by her husband, who returned home to Boston. When she got home with the children he went to his mother's.

Q—Would you say you ceased to have affection for your husband comparable to what you had for Larry Higgins? A—They are not comparable.

Q—Would you say you liked Larry Higgins better than your husband? A—Never. A—Never.

Q—When you wrote the letters, did you want the court to understand you had no affection for your husband? A—I had no affection for my husband.

AS A FRIEND

She said she grew to know Higgins very well. From 1923 to 1924, she said, he never displayed any affection for Higgins, but just regarded him as a friend of the family.

Q—Have you any anniversary which is celebrated by you and which Mr. Higgins celebrates with you? A—No.

Q—Anything of a sentimental nature attached to the 15th day of April by you both? A—No.

Q—Did he write you on April 15? A—I don't know.

Q—Didn't he write you or send you some message on April 15 every year after 1923? A—I don't remember.

She was shown a telegram addressed to her, but said she did not remember receiving it from Washington, D. C., April 15. It read:

"To me this anniversary will be cherished with divine smiles. Love everlastingly, Laurie."

Another telegram read as follows: "Mr. Corinthia, April 15, 1924. Divine memories. Love everlastingly, Laurie."

She explained by saying she was born in Lexington and met Higgins on there.

Mrs. Whitney was as much surprised as her attorneys when Robert T. Bushnell, district attorney of Middlesex County and chief of counsel for Harold O. Whitney, told her to take the stand, literally as a witness against herself.

"This proceeding is going to be as painful to me as to you," he said to her. "Please take a chair, if you wish to sit down, and if you want a drink of water or 'time out' for anything else, just speak out and say so."

Mrs. Whitney, speaking in a calm voice and seemingly perfectly self-possessed in spite of the staring eyes, then testified in answer to questions that she married Harold Whitney, March 16, 1921.

The grilling of Mrs. Whitney was

HUB HAS TOO MUCH WATER

Clinton, May 3 (AP)—For the first time in years water was released today from the great Wachusett reservoir, principal supply basin of the Boston Metropolitan system, into the old bed for the Nashua river. Recent rains, added to the increase in supply from the rains of August and November, have raised the level of the water 25 feet from the low mark of a year ago.

Today the water reached a level five inches above the normal high water mark, and engineers decided it would be necessary to release the surplus. The reservoir contains 30,000,000 gallons more water than it did a year ago.

$2,000,000 CAMBRIDGE SCHOOL BILL WINS O. K.

The legislative committee on municipal finance, after a hearing, voted today to report favorably the veto of the mayor and city council that Cambridge be authorized to borrow $2,000,000 for construction of school buildings. Mayor Quinn, Sen. John E. Kilduff and four members of the Cambridge school board opposed the bill.

DR. MULLOWNEY IS MADE STAFF FOOD EXPERT

The Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser take pleasure in announcing that Dr. F. H. Mallowney, for many years deputy commissioner of the Boston health department, in charge of the pure food division, has joined the staff of these papers.

Dr. Mallowney was released to the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser by Mayor Nichols and Dr. F. X. Mahoney, health commissioner.

Few things are more important than health in this world, and health is predicated on good, pure foods.

Dr. Mallowney has a national reputation as a pure food expert, being recognized as such by the War Department. During the war he was assigned to the office of quartermaster general in Washington as a supervisory inspector on subsistence, his duty being to examine supplies at food storage depots. In this connection, he saved thousands of soldiers from poisonous poisoning, when he discovered that a quantity of canned salmon was unfit, and the entire pack of 1918 was refused by the Government.

Dr. Mallowney was commissioned a major and as a member of the Officers' Reserve Corps has just completed a tour of duty.

After the war he returned to Boston, where he was reappointed deputy commissioner, after being forced to take a competitive examination.

back on public ownership in his veto message. "The Governor's position seems to me," he said, "that the public has no right to sign and say what it wants. It urged the veto be overridden."

Representative Green of Cambridge said Boston and Dorchester, Arlington, Belmont and Somerville are interested in rapid transit as well as Cambridge, and he believed unless auto traffic conditions are remedied there such a station would be dangerous. Representative McManis of Cambridge supported Representative Shattuck in his plea for an investigation.

BIRTHDAY LETTERS MUST BE BRIEFLY WRITTEN

The birthday letter again requests that boys and girls who write to him keep their letters as brief as possible. Many lengthy letters are coming in that do not keep to the point, but include explanations that are not necessary.

All that the Birthday Editor wishes you to do is to tell him, in as few words as possible, why you are glad that your birthday happens to fall on the date it does. Usually about 25 words is sufficient.

To the writers of the best letters he will send a ticket entitling the boy or girl to be the guest of this newspaper at Lower State Theatre, and also a birthday card that is worth framing.

Don't forget the two rules which govern this feature, one is that you must not be more than 18 years of age, and the other that you must mail your letter during the week which ends on your birthday. These rules are very simple, but they are important.

Address, Birthday Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Washington St., Boston.

REAR END SAYS L. A. HASN'T PAID HIM YET

"I'm a little tired," he said. "Parker said he would be glad to discontinue, but Reading, at suggestion of counsel, agreed to go on. Shortly after he requested that a window shade be pulled down. This was done, and a conversation with his counsel and the committee resulted in the announcement that news would be a half hour early."

"I'm very tired," said Reading. "I don't anticipate a few more moments' rest will help me very much. I'm going to take a little break before the committee. Parker said, 'I hope the committee will not be so tired that they will not be able to do their duty.' Parker said that Reading trust him and the attorney-general replied he would place the same trust in Parker as Parker did in him. Once Reading asked Parker to repeat a question, adding, 'I think it's perfectly ridiculous.' He was unable to leave out side."

At the start of the session it developed that several papers were missing from the report introduced at the Decimo Club convention. The attorney-general said he would try to obtain them.

Under direct questioning, Reading testified he had outlined to Dec. Atty. Gen. of Western Mass. L. A. W. settlement and that he had said he could see no reason why Reading should not act as counsel for the subscribers, nor any basis for criminal action.

Reading then told of meetings of legislative representatives and how the settlement was made.

All the letters which he sent out in relation to the settlement were on his private stationery, the attorney-general said.

From a check for $175,000 payable to him, Reading said he drew a check for himself for $30,000, taking $2000 in cash and certifying of deposit for $28,000 which was available for counsel fees and expenses. Alexander Whitehead, Reading's counsel, was discredited, testimony found among the subscribers, it developed.

Killed in Plane

Ignoring protests of three elderly and wealthy Natick sisters, Judge John C. Leggan in Middlesex Probate Court today appointed a conservator of their estate, Charles F. Kopp, chairman of the Natick board of public welfare.

The sisters are daughters of the late William Morse, who died intestate, and whose estate has never been administered, according to the evidence. The family have long been benefactors to Natick, a cousin, Mary M. Morse, having lived in the Natick Institute, a school for the blind, for many years.

The elderly sisters were in court, and when questioned all began chattering at once, although their remarks were seldom relevant. The protesting vigorously against appointment of a conservator, but Judge Leggan would not get a consent answer as to why the sisters refused to use money standing in their names in Framingham and Natick banks. Mrs. Lizzie refused to tell her age on the ground that it was nobody's business.

SMITH VICTORY LANDSLIDE IN CALIFORNIA

was in contrast with a total Republican registration in the State of more than 1,300,000.

DEMOCRATIC VOTE.

In the 1922 precincts was Smith, 129,641; Reed, 30,400; Walsh, 38,876.

As the total Democratic registration was about 445,000, it appeared that the three-cornered fight between the Democratic presidential aspirants did not draw much greater a percentage of the Democratic vote than the proportion which Hoover, unopposed, gathered from the Republican forces. It was estimated that about 80 per cent of the registered voters cast ballots.

The vote in Los Angeles County, home of McAdoo and theoretical fortress of the dry Democrats, was the outstanding feature. Of the county's 181,579, Smith, 173,901; Reed 17,646; Walsh, 15,710.

Walsh's failure to register more heavily also was a surprise. Supported by McAdoo in the south and the force of prominent Democrats in northern California, the Montana Senator came in a poor third.

Smith Now Needs 239 1/2 Votes for Nomination

Washington, May 2.—By his sweeping victory in the California presidential primaries Alfred E. Smith has passed his first test in the race for the nomination at the Houston convention.

His backers are sure he will be elected on the first ballot.

In bagging California's 28 convention votes, Smith brought his claimed delegate total up to 474, or 134 1/2 short of the two-thirds necessary to nominate. He claims to 40, however, are disputed.

FLORIDA LAND DEALS

Reading said he had contracted to purchase 2000 acres of land in Cornelia, Fla., for $75,000. He organized the Gulf City Improvement Association, capitalized for $125,000, and sold approximately $40,000 worth of stock. He figured his profit was $35,000. He figured his profit was $35,000.

Development of Reading was begun by Herbert Parker.

Q—When you first took up your investigation or inquiry of Decimo you were acting, were you not, in the capacity of attorney-general? A—That is correct. There had been a point scheme in Massachusetts. My investigation of the Decimo Club was undertaken solely because of representations made to me by newspapermen that it might be a second point scheme.

PARKER GRILLS READING.

Q—But didn't you realize, after your jurisdiction over the matter and the occasion for you to inquire was because the subject matter related to a foreign corporation, that I never gave any thought to the matter of it being a foreign corporation?

Q—Then, to that extent, do you think you did not acquire sufficient knowledge to inquire into the matter? A—I knew it was incorporated under the laws of Delaware.

Q—Did you know that the question of that corporation doing business in Massachusetts was under the charge and observation of the commissioner of corporations and taxes? A—No, I did not.

Q—You understood that inquiry with knowledge and recognition of your official duties as attorney-general of Massachusetts? A—Oh, absolutely.

Q—Did there come a time when you considered that your realization of the subject matter had changed? A—If you mean there came a time when I ceased to view Decimo from an official viewpoint, there did come a time when that ended.

Parker then asked if he reached that conclusion before he entered the service of Decimo Club. Reading replied that he had.

CALLS QUESTION RIDICULOUS.

Parker—When questions affecting clients of a foreign corporation are raised, they never finally can be settled until the Supreme Court of Massachusetts has made its decision.

Reading—Please repeat the question. I think it's ridiculous.

There was laughter. Chairman James warned the witness to answer questions and leave out side remarks. Reading said: "Oh, Mr. Parker, you don't mean that."

Q—Did you undertake to enter the service of the Decimo Club? A—I did.

Q—When did you enter into an agreement to enter its employ? A—Reading then said when he made an express reservation that he would be permitted to withdraw at any time he considered it advisable.

OBLIGATION OF HIS OATH.

Q—As a result of that reservation which you had in your mind, did you doubt the extent to which you should be employed? A—I did not.

Q—Can you conceive of any broader obligation than when you took the oath of office of attorney-general? A—I can conceive of obligations equally broad.

Q—Very well, sir. Did you consider that you were bound by a divided allegiance? A—I did not have a divided allegiance.

Q—Did you consider you could properly advise the department of taxation on a matter affecting a foreign corporation? A—Yes.

Q—And in the meantime, be in the way of the Commonwealth and this organization? A—Yes.

Reading said his predecessor engaged in private practice, and that he was following the precedent set by him.

Corn beef and cabbage is easily made. The corn beef is cut in

A pound of whole wheat flour, a half loaf of dried, rye bread, two eggs, a little salt and pepper will make a good mixture, similar to the baryshke knoele. Mrs. Fitzmaurice, in the first step.

Then the batter is rolled into balls, with the chopped, bell man in the center. The balls are then into a frying pan and cooked until they come to the surface, as the ling commission physicians who examined him the afternoon of the battle, but he did not feel the effects of the war in his condition.

These "wise men" however, lost an opportunity to clean up a fortune because of their reluctance in referring to lay odds to get their wagers down, and scared off the money usually back the French Canadian.

"I bet in close and went to work," Delaney has never looked upon himself as a heavyweight, and he succeeded quickly after being referred up.

"I bet in there to lose he could have done it without enduring that fearful punishment. He could have stayed on the floor after the first round."

"I bet on the underdogs."

Instead he got up and ran him in to a terrific upset that has made him a name.

INVESTIGATION ON.

Chairman James Farley of the boxing commission said this afternoon that he is making a thorough investigation of the fight.

It is his personal opinion that there was nothing wrong with the fight, but declared that his deputies are running down every rumor that he has heard previous to the fight.

Sharkey Is Going on Fishing Trip

Jack Sharkey was not worried to day over the New York boxing commission's investigation of his one round knockout of Jack Delaney in New York. At his home in Brighton Sharkey said he was getting to James Farley, chairman of the New York boxing commission, admitted to the writer that he had not sent a deputy commissioner to Bridgeport to learn of Delaney's condition before the fight. Usually the commission keeps a good line on the participants in a fight of the calibre of the Sharkey-Delaney bout.

"I did not send a deputy to Bridgeport," Farley admitted.

Now, however, Sharkey said he was "getting used to it."

With Mrs. Sharkey, who always accompanied him to his prize fights, he left Boston for New York. Upon his arrival he was met by a crowd of 100,000. Near New York, however, he

The majority of the fight experts in the press row shows they did not believe that there was anything wrong with the fight itself. Some of then did remark Delaney unrobed that he appeared to be carrying extra weight, especially around the waist line.

But, however, the Evening Journal's boxing expert, had heard that Delaney had broken training last week and wasn't fit physically or mentally to cope with a man who outweighed him 14 to 15 pounds. But Sid could not verify the rumor.

Since the dramatic finish Mercier had received a poor reception from the fans, he was not even making him more determined to win. "No one likes to be booed for not winning," said Sharkey.

After the fight, Sharkey said he landed on Delaney as fast as he could. He said that a hurricane fight was the thing this season and that he was going to show the fans what they wanted. Sharkey said he clared he came through the bout without a scratch.

has talked to many head waggers along Caulfield row, and while some of them were vehement to the point of accusing "Delaney of backing up the conservative ones," he admitted that the French Canadian's condition never had a chance to be a factor.

SHARKEY IN SAVAGE MOOD.

"They agreed that Sharkey is a winning mood, savage and aggressive, would have beaten Delaney down, condition or no condition, by the relentless attack he made before the other Jack could untrack himself after the bell," says Mercer.

Continuing, Mercer says: "It may be argued that Delaney seemed dull, that he didn't hear the starting bell and that instead of stepping around cleverly he began to fold up after the first good punch landed by Sharkey, but the fact remains that the Boston gob, fighting as he did against Delaney, drove

Jack Dempsey all over the ring last summer in a frenzied first round sortie.

"You may recall that Dempsey could not get started then because Sharkey rammed blows on him and kept forcing him to retreat. It looked then as if the old champion wouldn't last three rounds.

"But Dempsey always could 'take it.' So can Tom Heeney, who stopped three of Starkey's best adoptive brothers with his fists."
